Kumquat curd: delightful silky specialty. Everything is mini sized here. Even the puff pastry flower cups. And again, I wonder if this could be a breakfast or an afternoon snack. Since kumquat is an olive sized tangerine, I honestly cannot imagine to peel it, take the seeds away and eat it. Not because it is slightly bitterish.

Joanne's recipe for housemade Nutella babka is excerpted below. The dense loaf is swirled with homemade Nutella (though easily swapped for the store-bought variety, too) sliced and braided into one thick log, then drenched in a nutty, hazelnut syrup. It's the kind of thing you want to wake up to in the morning or serve during a Hanukkah feast (or really almost any Jewish festivity).
