Seven Minutes in Heaven is worth a read. James can write a HR much better than most. Her pacing is good, as is her delivery of a rollicking plot and a broad cast of characters, with even the stereotypes (evil grandmother, two eccentric/grieving children, intolerant governesses, snobbish matchmaking mothers) sufficiently well drawn to be credible.

"Seven Minutes in Heaven" is set in the romantic Cape Cod, where the beach itself will sweep you in. The setting of the story is breathtaking. As I was reading I imagined myself walking along the beach and meeting up with the story's two main characters, Megan and Andi. At the same time the salty air from the ocean penetrates my soul.
